If you are reading the labels on your pet's foods, you are doing the right thing. However, labels don't often tell the whole story. Frequently, they are superficial representations of a product. When we cruise down the pet food aisles, labels are seldom able to adequately describe the product they represent. Though the fine print may contain the ingredients, how educated are we when it comes to which ingredients are desirable and undesirable for our pets? When it comes to the things our pets take into their bodies, we should pay attention ... not only to the ingredients on the label, but also to what's behind the ingredients. What aren't the labels saying? This issue of The HealthyPetNet News will focus on label reading. Let's start with some of the ingredients.

Proteins ... Our pets' diets should contain high quantities of protein. Protein is the building block of the body. Every cell in the body requires protein. However, just like everything else, protein has rich sources and poor sources. When you are reading labels, look out for the poor sources of protein such as soybean meal, wheat and corn. Because they are cheaper, these ingredients are often used as protein content in many foods. They have some protein, though not enough. Nothing can replace meat, chicken, fish and eggs -- the type of protein our dogs and cats require. While we can turn a tofu burger into a protein delight, dogs and cats have very different digestive systems than we do.

Finding the better types of protein on the label does not justify a stamp of approval on that food. The quality of the proteins and where they come from are vital. For example, chicken meal is the dry muscle of the chicken, containing some bone and skin. The higher the amount of bone and skin, the less muscle meat ... thus the lower the quality of the chicken meal. Included in your quality check is the type of chicken used in your pet's food. Chickens given hormones and steroids certainly can't be as healthy for your pet as those raised without these chemicals. But that's not your only protein concern. You need to know if that same chicken could have been sold to your supermarket for your meal. Pet food manufacturers often use animals that don't pass for human consumption because they are far less expensive than higher-grade meats. The problems with the animals that don't pass inspection are plentiful. These rejects, often known as the four D's (dead, dying, diseased or decayed) aren't identified on the label. While the manufacturers that use these types of meat think cooking is going to render the meats safe for our pets to eat, you may ask yourself if you would want to cook these types of meats for yourself or your children. This is an atrocious practice in the commercial pet food industry that many of us aren't aware of...after all, who would put that on their label?

Chemical Preservatives and Food Coloring ...

Many pet foods contain the chemical preservatives BHA, BHT and ethoxyquin. Scientific studies have deemed these chemicals harmful. According to the National Toxicology Program Report on Carcinogens 10th Report, part of the National Institute of Health, BHA is listed as being "Reasonably anticipated to be a human carcinogen." While it may allow the food to stay fresh longer, why would we want our pets to ingest it -- even small amounts of it? Ethoxyquin is another preservative your pets shouldn't have to eat. Even though the allowable levels of ethoxyquin that can be included in the food have been decreased due to health concerns, it is still allowed. Why would we knowingly feed this obviously harmful chemical to our pets? There are other chemicals to be on the look out for. Food colorings are still very commonly used in pet foods on the market today despite the fact that they are completely unnecessary and medically unwise. Our dogs and cats can't see color. Those chemical dyes are put in for our esthetic benefits.

Byproducts ... Byproducts are the virtual opposite of whole foods. They are used by many manufacturers because once again, they are often much cheaper. They can contain the internal and less desirable parts of animals such as heads, necks, undeveloped eggs, feet, intestines, lungs, tendons and ligaments.

Life's Abundance[®] Premium Foods ... What Our Labels Might Not Tell You

Dr. Jane Bicks formulated Life's Abundance[®] Premium Health Foods for Dogs and Cats. They are natural, wholesome and packed with nutrients. Here are some things that our labels might not say.

High Quality Proteins ...

Life's Abundance[®] uses only the highest sources of protein. We use absolutely no protein byproducts. Also, we use only hormone and steroid free chicken meal as opposed to whole chicken, which tends to contain a lot of water and fat. In addition, Life's Abundance[®] uses only the best turkey meal and liver meal. We use farmed catfish, so they are free of ocean pollutants. The fish meal and fish oils contain omega 3 fatty acids. These nutrients are the subject of tremendous scientific interest. They have been scientifically proven to promote a healthier body, supporting all areas of the body including the nervous system, immune system, circulatory system and skin and coat.

Natural Preservatives and Freshness ...

While you can read the label to know that we add no artificial colors or chemical preservatives to our foods, they won't be found in any of the ingredients we use. Our food is preserved with natural mixed tocopherols (vitamin E). Freshness is insured by using the ingredients as they arrive rather than stocking up on them so we can buy greater quantities at a savings. Our food is made in small batches to further insure freshness. Chances are if you buy any given bag of Life's Abundance[®], it was made no more than four weeks ago.

Antioxidants ... One of the current theories of aging is the "free radical" theory. We know that free radicals are formed every second of our lives. These dangerous active molecules attack the cells all over the body, eventually killing them.

... What Our Labels Might Not Tell You

Antioxidants help eliminate free radicals. They are so important to our health that they are now included in most daily supplements, for us! Life's Abundance[®] food is packed with powerful antioxidants.

Other health essential nutrients ...

No matter how good the formula and quality of ingredients, if the intestines are not healthy the nutrients can't be absorbed. Probiotics, otherwise known as friendly bacteria are added to Life's Abundance[®]. We all know the virtues of yogurt with the live bacterial culture (probiotic) called Acidophilus. We use acidophilus as well and we combine it with four other types of friendly bacteria. That's because the intestines require a healthy balance of bacteria. If unhealthy bacteria flourish, it can compromise your pets immune system and the ability to use the nutrients in the food. Probiotics support a healthy intestinal system. Minerals are absorbed through the intestines and into the body. If minerals are tied to protein, they become even better absorbed, and that's why we use chelated minerals.

Manufacturing facilities ...

Although you may have the best pet food formula in the world, if it is not made by a trusted manufacturer, all of that sound formulating can go to waste! Manufacturers ultimately determine the wholesomeness and the freshness of the food depending on the way ingredients are selected, how they are cooked and the quality control behind it all. Our manufacturer is a third generation father son business and has very high standards of operation. Their expertise with their low temperature, fast cooking method ensures maximum nutritional value in the food. They have a special certification, which allows the sale of food to the European markets. Since Europe has higher standards of food safety than we do in the United States, the manufacturing plant and ingredients undergo rigid inspection under the APHIS program.

Feline's Fiery Rescue

Pixie never bothered us while we slept. She was much too well trained and her sensibilities were too courteous. Whenever she wished to sleep in our bed, she would enter our bedroom quietly in the middle of the night and curl up near our feet and go to sleep with us. We would wake up and find her there the next morning, an orange, meowing pool of light.

One abrupt night Cero and I woke up to Pixie jumping all over our chests and screeching at the top of her lungs. We were completely startled. This behavior was so unlike her. Next came the oppressive smell, then the sound of our newborn baby Jessie crying through the baby monitor. Now we were fully awake and aware that our lives were in danger.

We bolted out of bed. I stormed into Jessie's room while Cero eased towards the kitchen where the thick reams of smoke were coming from. By the time I got Jessie out of her crib and went to the front of the house, the entire kitchen and family room were both consumed in fire. The fire had spread so far it was impossible to get to the front door. Even Pixie couldn't get out now through her kitty door. We didn't have a back door, so Cero and I started to panic. I've never felt so helpless in my life. It was like my brain shut down and I couldn't think. I think Cero was feeling the same way. The fire was hot and menacing and the smoke was making us feel lightheaded.

We followed Pixie to Jessie's room and she jumped up and started scratching on the window. We couldn't believe that we didn't even think of it! We were so busy panicking that we had failed to think clearly. We escaped from the fire through the window. We wouldn't be alive today if it wasn't for our precious cat. If we ever doubted her unconditional love for us, we never will again. Erin H., Charlottesville, VA

Testimonials from Happy Customers

Dear HPN:

We ordered and received the eight-pound package of Life's Abundance – in two business days. The good news is that our persnickety little Maltese normally turns her nose up at anything new or 'stuff' out of the grocery store. When I opened the package, she immediately got down off her perch and wanted to know what I was doing. I gave her a serving, and then she ate it!!!
R.S.

Dear HPN:

My 16-year-old Shih-Tzu has been doing wonderfully since eating Life's Abundance and taking his Agility pills. Thanks.
G.Y.

Dear HPN:

I have had the dogs on the food for a couple of months now and their coats are awesome! So shiny and getting so thick. Something that is very important in the show ring with a golden. I am totally elated over their coats! You do good work. Again, thank you.
R.E.

Dear HPN:

Thank you very much. I am so happy to find the best food I can feed my dog. I never felt any other dog food was worthy enough to give her. I am so glad I found you guys!
Angela

Dear HPN:

I have done an extensive comparison of dog food products and have come to the conclusion you are correct. Your products are far superior to other dog foods available. I have two Golden Retrievers who are on Life's Abundance and doing very well. I have recommended it to many of my friends who care about their animals as much as I do. Thank you.

Ask Dr. Jane Bicks

Dear Dr. Jane:

May I mix a dry food with a wet food for both my cats and dogs?

Dr. Jane's Answer:

If the same manufacturer makes both foods, you can. If not, you may throw off the balance of the dry food. Realize that once you mix a canned food with a dry food, you have a perishable meal and will not be able to keep the food down all day long.

Dear Dr. Jane:

My cat has had urinary tract problems on and off for the last few years. May I feed her Life's Abundance Cat food?

Dr. Jane's Answer:

Feline Lower Urinary Tract Disease has many causes. These causes include obesity, breed predilection (Persians and Himalayans are more susceptible), allergy, bacteria, and possible virus. Foods should produce a urine pH that is slightly acidic, about 6.6-6.8. That is what Life's Abundance produces in healthy cats. If a cat doesn't drink enough water, the urine can become too concentrated. Those cats may require a canned food a few times a week or all the time. Speak to your family veterinarian.

Dear Dr. Jane:

Is canned food better than dry? It looks more like real food.

Dr. Jane Bicks is a highly respected and nationally recognized holistic veterinarian. She is author of three books on pet care and nutrition and has served on professional boards including the Cornell Feline Health Center. Dr. Bicks uses the best of modern science and "mother nature" to formulate all HealthyPetNet™ Products.

Dr. Jane's Answer:

Canned food contains 75-78% water. That doesn't leave very much room for nutrients and thus your pet has to eat a great deal of food to get its nutritional requirement. Dry food is a more concentrated source of nutrition with about 10% water, leaving 90% for nutrients. Canned food may look like meat but it can consist of textured soy that is colored and flavored to taste like meat.
